

Hi I work in a lab doing QA tests on concrete cubes and cylinders, we are looking into prism block testing

Written by

Friday, 26 September 2008 11:37

---

Yes, the method given in the ASTM C39 "Standard Test method for Compressive Strength of Cylindrical Concrete Specimens" can be used for testing concrete specimens of prismatic shape. If the requirement is of compressive strength only, there are no extra precautions to be taken, other than those required normally for cylindrical specimens.